was lost, by a vote of 4 to 3.

Notifing was done towards the selection of any other site or the making of any provision for the accommodation the coming year of the children who have heretofore practically been deprived of all benefits of the schools. The principal selected is said to be a very thorough and accomplished teacher, and if good assistants are secured there is a probability of creditable schools for a part of the children in spite of a most incompetent set of men to manage them.

The Republican Senatorial Convention

The question whether or not a convention shall be called to revise the State Constitution will be voted upon next Monday. The indications are that the question will be carried in the affirmative by a large majority.

Colonel Frank Waters, the Democratic nomines for the Legislature, is not as popular as we had supposed. The Garette, this morning is non-committal, and sette, this morning, is non-committal, and the Dispatch will positively refuse to support the Colonel. It is claimed that he is the nominee of a "ring" and not of the party; that he is the candidate of a few personal friends and in no wise represents the Democratic constituency of the city. It is generally conceded that Mr. R. P. Stoll, the Republican nominee, will have an easy victory over his oppo-nent. Not a few Democrats will vote for General Stoll in preference to Colonel Waters.

The Democratic meeting at Odd-fellows' Hall last night consisted of a large and intelligent audience. An elequent and able address was delivered by Hon. James B. McCreary, the Democratic candidate for Governor. The speaker expressed himself in favor of a reconciliation between the North and South, and dwelt for some length on the good results such an issue would have. He denounced the Republican party for having token no side on the Civil Rights bill, and Miter a review of National politics, he concinded with touching upon the tariff law. He was followed by Col. Thomas L. Jones, after which the meeting adjourned.

"Well, speak right up. It's a part of our duty to cheer the lonely and dappressed. Your words will fall on willing ears."
"But, sir, it's so silly."
"Yes; but a great many of the troubles in this world are silly; so unburden your heart without fear."
"Well, sir, I want some one to love. I want some one whom I can cling to, and eat loe cream with warm right; some one who can appreciate the deep feelings of my heart, and..."
"Take you to the circus?"
"Yes; and come to see me nights, and love to linger by my side; some one who will wander with me by the bubbling brook, and carry me across the muddy places."
"Yes, I see; you want some one to be a lover to you, in all that the word implies."
"That's it. But I can't find any such. I wear flowers on my hat, but it don't be leasn the Phonix love. The bean to

"That's it. But I can't find any such. I wear flowers on my hat, but it don't please the Phomix boys. I've been to Oswego once or twice, but they say that my mouth is too small. I've written tender lines and little poems, to the boys at Grauby Centre, but yet I'm a wail."

"How lonely you must be. Live a mill pond with the bullirogs all fished out; like a fancy bar at a hotel, where they only sell lemonade; like a cider barred with its head caved in; like a cider barred with its stem broken; like a—; but, ah, me, it's awful sad."

"But don't the Fulton boys like to bask in the sunshine of love!"

"Well, most of them had rather lean against the shady side of a barn since it's begun to be se hot."

"And don't they trade pictures with girls, and become interested in the originals?"

"Hardly ever; they are heartless wretches. But l'il tell you what. Come up here real often—not too often, though—and sit by the open window and shap at the festive spiders on the window-sill with a piece of rubber cord, and learn to take the world as you find it. And bye-and-bye, after years have comband gone, you will get to love this place, and then you can be a mother to Nigret Pete's three babies, which his aunt left him."

Animal Phosphorescence.

Animal Phosphorescence.

Among the marvels which excite the admiration of the student of Nature, not the least strange is the group of obsonomena known under the name of Animal Phosphorescence. We are accustomed to associate light with heat, and to consider that fire of some kind is necessary to its production, that the imagination is appealed to withunusual force, when we find light proceeding from the body of a living animal. Yet it is well known that the emission of light is not an uncommon characteristic among the members of the imperteurate divisions of the animal kingdom. Travelers have often expatiated on the beauty of the scenes which they have witnessed in the tropics, when the seas or forests have seemed to be illuminated by innumerable sparks of fire; and recent discoveries have shown that the luminous quality is even more common than was previously supposed. During the dredging expeditions of H. M. S. Porcupine is the years 1869 and 1870, so many of the deep-sea animals were found to be phosphorescent, that Prof. Thomson has auggested that the light necessary to the development of the eyesight which some of the specimens possessed may have its origin in that source. In allmal phosphorescent, that Prof. Thomson has auggested that the light necessary to the development of the eyesight which some of the specimens possessed may have its origin in that source. In allmal phosphorescence, as in all her works, Nature exhibits an immense variety in the forms in which sue displays will be visible in a full secretion; in all other, it will manifest itself torough the action of a minute and complicated organ; one apocies of animal will shing with a yellow light; a second, with orliniant green; a third, with pare lifac; and we are acquainted with one instance is which the light changes successively to the chief colors of the solar spectrum. The causes which produce these phonomena are still very obscure. Although many forms of ille are known in whigh the luminous quality is present, solar the phenomena themselve
